Technology in the Modern Workplace WORKSHOP

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 12, 2019 | 9 AM - 3 PM

In our Modern Era, technology changes daily. Have you seen where it is going now? Are you prepared to handle changes in how we communicate, share data, and access the Web? Are you ready for the dangers that these changes bring?

Since the introduction of the modern computer in the mid-1950s, technology has changed on an almost annual basis. With the invention of the internet and modern communication devices, that pace changed. Today we see massive swings in the speed and processing power of our tools on an almost daily basis. These changes have led to completely new ways for companies and individuals to communicate and share information. They've also led to dangers and challenges that could cost a company all of its information and financial resources. A company is no longer profitable or safe doing business like usual; today you have to have a new plan by looking forward. Join us as we talk about the future trends in computing and communications. Our panel of industry experts will share a vision of next-generation computing hardware and software. We will also discuss the new generation of dangers that are no longer based on fiction/conjecture, but are instead a matter of fact. Come and get a glimpse of the future so you and your company can be prepared.
